Announcing Indibook

The film industry's first online crew booking service

London, UK:

With the launch of Indibook, the world's film industry can at last find, book and manage their film crews online.

Until today, all film crew had to be found either by calling up the individual or using a telephone-based Diary Service which manages their clients' film bookings.

Indibook changes all that by providing crew with an online diary which film productions can access, allowing them to check the crew's availability and book them instantly. Indibook also provides crew with a searchable CV which helps production companies to choose the right team from a wide range of freelance talent.

Indibook also delivers a secure and traceable messaging service to facilitate easier communication during the production and text alerts so that nobody misses bookings or changes to their status.

"Indibook originated from my experience working in London production offices where you may have to find 30-40 film crew in a short space of time for a commercial shoot the following week. It's such a laborious and time-consuming process. Having worked on both sides of the fence - in production and as a freelance crew member - I decided to scratch my own itch and find a solution." Richard Lingard

About Indibook:

Indibook Ltd brings together the talents of Film Assistant Director, Richard Lingard and Business IT Specialist, Chris Ridgeon. Both bring a wealth of experience from their respective film and internet industries and have developed Indibook after extensive discussion with film production companies and crew.
